-Improved the looks of the "Main" page of the website and added the user modal to both pages so the user could log in.
-Begun improving our express server and endpoints

Commentary: Had a fun time improving the page's looks

-Tried to connect a Atlas mongo DB to the website and utterly failed, even though all the requirements were met for the connection, it was impossible to establish a connection. The database registered a connection but didn't fetch any data from it.
-Begun implementing a log in method with OAuth, couldn't maintain the session

Commentary: The database represented an issue even until now, I never managed to crack the code to make it work correctly.

-I managed to fix my js file so it could correctly keep the cookie info so the session will be kept and the user modal could work correctly.
-Made some minor tweaks and fixes to the website.

Commentary: Mongo was a big and bitter challenge until the very end. I'm very sad I couldn't help neither with the refactor of the page nor manage to make the button in "Help" connect with the DB.
